True Stories. Timeless Songs.

Songwriter • Author • Publisher

Hey Y'all... Thank you for taking a moment to get to know me a little better.

If you're here looking for another polished songwriter bio filled with fancy industry words, well... that's probably not me.

I'm a southern gal in Georgia who's been writing her whole life.

Long before I ever wrote songs, I filled notebooks with poems, stories, and little moments I didn't want to forget.

Writing has always been how I made sense of life.

Truth be told, I never set out to become a songwriter.

That happened because of my momma.

She was an incredible singer-songwriter, and after she passed away a few years ago, I made her a promise.

I'd keep writing.

I'd carry on where she left off.

So, I dug into poems and random thoughts I'd collected over the years and started turning them into songs. After that I've just kept writing and writing.

People ask me all the time where my ideas come from.

That's easy. Life.

Every song I write comes from something real.

Sometimes it's funny.

Sometimes it'll break your heart.

Sometimes it's one of those stories that makes you shake your head and say, "There ain't no way that really happened."

Oh yeah... It did.

One of the songs that's closest to my heart is "A Girl and Her Jeep."

Folks think it's a song about rebuilding an old Jeep.

They're right.

But they're only hearing half the story.

The day I bought that ole Jeep, everybody else saw an old worn-out pile of junk.

But, I seen myself in her.

She'd been neglected.

She'd been beat up.

She had a lot of scars.

Most people would've hauled her off for scrap.

I couldn't.

Because somewhere underneath all that mess was something worth saving.

Turns out... I seen myself in her.

That Jeep taught me more about life than I ever expected.

Every busted knuckle reminded me that good things take time.

Every mistake taught me something.

Every little victory gave me a little more confidence.

By the time she finally fired up and rolled down the road under her own power...

I wasn't the same woman who'd brought her home.

That's probably why I write the songs I do.

WALL

I'm drawn to stories about ordinary people doing extraordinary things.

People who get knocked down but keep getting back up.

People who find hope after heartbreak.

People who refuse to let life have the last word.

I've been blessed beyond anything I ever imagined.

I've had songs recorded.

I've heard them played on the radio.

I've watched complete strangers connect with the songs I write. It's beyond humbling and I'm so grateful for the honor.

I also own Dirt Road Country Publishing, I believe in taking care of the business end of the songs I've poured my heart into to write.

And somewhere along the way, I wrote a book called After You Write The Song.

It's not fancy.

It's not complicated.

It's just the book I wish somebody had handed me years ago.

If it helps one songwriter avoid a few of the mistakes my momma and I learned the hard way...

Then every page was worth writing.

So that's me.

I'm not chasing perfection.

As a matter of fact I'm not chasing anything.

I believe folks know what they love, what makes them tap their toes and they enjoy the music that resonates with them.

If one of my songs makes you laugh... Cry... Call your sister... Forgive somebody...

Or reminds you that you're stronger than you thought you were...

Then I've done exactly what I set out to do.

Thanks for stopping by.

Now...

Go on, and listen to some songs.
